What Kinds of Cat Litter Boxes are the Best?

These days you can find a number of litter boxes available. You used to be able to just grab any old square box and dump litter into it. Now, you can choose between covered and uncovered boxes, designer boxes that might look like houses or castles or self-cleaning units. Regardless of whether or not you want something that's high tech and complicated or a more traditional cat litter box it's imperative that you spend some time looking around at all of the available options before making a choice. The article information below will help you weed through the most popular models and make a more informed decision as to what's right for your cat and you.

If you're starting off with a kitten, you have to get a litter box for it right away. A basic, square box that is open, easy to see, and get into is the best option for a kitten. A self cleaning box isn't appropriate for a kitten younger than eight weeks old. So with kittens, you're best approach is to start off with an inexpensive and simple litter box and then decide later on if you want to purchase something with extra features. If you want a litter box that does almost all the work for you, CatGenie makes a self-cleaning box that's more like a toilet for cats. You'll find that this is not an inexpensive alternative to the standard box but you won't have to do the work either. With this sanitary waste removal system you'll never have to scoop another litter box ever!

Consider the Booda Dome Clean Step Litter Box if you need to solve these issue in an inexpensive manner. the Booda Dome Clean Step Litter Box is a covered box large enough for two cats. Your cats paws will stay cleaner and less litter will escape the box with the elevated ramp and unique design. There is a filter that helps keep odor under control. This Booda Dome Clean Step Litter Box only costs around $30 and offers many helpful features.

Kitty litter boxes are available in many sizes, styles, and for varying prices. When choosing a litter box, be sure to consider the personality of your cat. But if you want to change their habits, most cats can make adjustments. You should be able to easily find a litter box that meets your needs due to all the available options.
